

SRA Update

Issue 113 - March 2023

- General updates [#tab_545a1]
- Compliance updates [#tab_545a2]

Welcome to the latest issue of SRA Update. Last month we talked about the use of strategic litigation against public participation – SLAPPs. Although it is important that claimants can bring legitimate claims and for solicitors to act fearlessly in their interest, that should never extend to abusing the litigation process. SLAPPS have the potential to be a threat to the rule of law and free speech. In this issue, we share the findings of our review into firms working in this area of the law. Our findings were generally positive, but there's still more firms could be doing. The actions of a few can undermine trust in the profession. Also in this issue we have agreed the final rules for running our own indemnity scheme for post six-year negligence claims, our financial penalties regime, and for publishing disciplinary decisions.

Review shows firms need to do more on SLAPPs [<https://www.sra.org.uk/home/hot-topics/slapps-abusive-litigation/>]

Law firms need to do more to guard against the risk of strategic lawsuits against public participation (SLAPPs) and other types of abusive litigation, our new review has shown. We visited 25 law firms, including those who work on the claimant and defendant side. Through interviews and file reviews, we assessed how well firms understand and manage the risks around abusive litigation.

Updated approach to fines and publishing decisions [<https://www.sra.org.uk/sra/news/press/2023-press-releases/financial-penalties-publication-policy/>]

We have confirmed the detail of changes for how we levy financial penalties to law firms and solicitors. The reforms will come into effect later this year. We have also published our approach to publishing information on disciplinary decisions to make sure it is transparent and accessible.

Board finalises rules for post six-year client protection

[<https://www.sra.org.uk/sra/news/press/2023-press-releases/six-year-negligence-claims-rules/>]

Our Board has agreed the final rules which will bring the Solicitors Indemnity Fund (SIF) under our control and make sure future consumer protection for post six-year negligence claims continues. The rules will now be submitted to the Legal Services Board (LSB) for approval, ahead of the new arrangements becoming effective from October.

Standards and Regulations – minor amends to our rules
[<https://www.sra.org.uk/sra/news/press/2022-press-releases/standards-regulations-amends-consultation/>]

We are consulting on a series of minor amendments to our Standards and Regulations to clarify our rules. This comes after feedback from stakeholders suggested the new rules had either had unintended consequences or needed to be clearer on specific issues. You have less than a week left to respond.

Welcome to the latest issue of Compliance News. We all play a role in making sure public trust in the profession is maintained. Fundamental to that trust is clients knowing that their money is safe. Our Accounts Rules govern how you protect this money. Misuse of client money is a serious matter and will likely end up at the Solicitors Disciplinary Tribunal. This issue features a range of updates on Accounts Rules matters, such as the need to get an accountant's report, case studies on Rule 3.3 which prohibits use of the client account for banking facilities, and updated information on being asked to hold client money when you do not have a client account in the first place. And following the one-year anniversary of the Russian invasion of Ukraine, it is an appropriate time to remind you how important is it that you keep up to date with the financial sanctions regime.

Client accounts and accountants' reports

[<https://www.sra.org.uk/sra/news/sra-update-113-accountants-reports/>]

If you hold or receive client money then you must obtain an accountant's report for the relevant period. Any report that is qualified because it shows a failure to comply with our rules should be delivered to us.

Make sure you do not provide banking facilities

[<https://www.sra.org.uk/sra/news/press/2023-press-releases/banking-facilities-ban-case-studies/>]

As the High Court has said, banks do not give legal advice, so solicitors should not provide banking facilities. Our rules explicitly prohibit a law firm from providing banking facilities through its client account. Any movement of money from a client account must be in respect of the delivery of regulated services provided by a law firm.

Update to help with client account queries

[https://www.sra.org.uk/solicitors/guidance/operate-client-account/#collapse_6a1d]

A number of firms have approached us for guidance where the client has approached them asking them to hold monies on their behalf, but they do not wish to do so. We have therefore added this – and our response – to our client account Q&As.

Keep up to date with the financial sanctions regime

[<https://www.sra.org.uk/sra/news/press/2022-press-releases/sanctions-regime-stay-compliant/>]

We have published guidance to help you understand your obligations under the Government's financial sanctions regime. This situation is fast-changing – the regulations changed just before Christmas to include a ban on providing trust services to those connected with Russia. Our guidance should help you keep up to date.
